THE FOLLOWING, from the Washington Star, is evidently intended as a wet blanket on the mining and mining stock speculation boom in the east. It will make little difference what the newspapers say averse to mining as a speculation or as a legitimate business. The nanks of the miners or of the speculators will grow so long as there is prepious metal to be dug, and doubt as to the extent of the ere deposits. It may be true, as inequently alleged, that only our man in a hundred, gets rich by mining, but it is also true that each of the hundred thinks he is to be the lucky individual, and is willing to run the ninety-nine risks of failure for the sake of the one chance to win. The Star says.

facts in relation to the cost and returns of gold and silver mining. According to his estimates, the cost of mining gold in California, from 1848 to 1856 (in value of ting. If Georgia goes back on Grant in this manner, what may be expected in $2,285,760,000, while the minit value of the actual product of gold for the same period was only $450,000,000, so that the gold produced cost about five times as maich as its real value. Silver mining produces no better results, according to the same authority, not withstanding the great productiveness for a while of the famous Comstock lode in Ney ala. Mr. Delmar dees not rank, we think, with the highest order of statisticians, either in regard to his calculations or the conclusions drawn from them, but it is safe to assume that he is not farout of the way in this instance. There is at any rate a good deal of collateral evidence in support of his view, and it he believed that a close comparison of say twenty years' transactions of the San Francisco Stock Board, which wou'd correctly abow the investments, commissions and assessments on the one hand and the dividends on the one hand and the dividends or a the other, would fully bear out Mr. Delmar's estimates, if, indeed, they did not make a much worse showing.
